Freedom is created by faith, service, character. In a sense, it can be passed, like a fine work of art, from one generation to another, but essentially it is "of the spirit". For Vahram Y. Rejebian, the pilgrimage to freedom began somewhere around Hadjin, Turkey at a time when every external circumstance seemed to block the journey.

For the Israelites, Exodus was a pilgrimage of deliverance, ensured and enlightened by a unique God, who was anxiously concerned about their growth in freedom. For this God, freedom was their ultimate pilgrim destination in life, and so this event which took place around 1200 BC can easily be termed as the 'longest pilgrimage to freedom'.
